THE WORD OF CHEER.

George was "blue". His "steady" had given him his graduation papers and he had done his stunt, multi-cum weepa. And the world in general had handed out to George large hunks of thorny spheres. His father had failed in business, which, of course, put George on the work, causing him many a sad hour of actual manual labor. George had also been presented with a shaded optic by "steady's" best friend and his successor. George sauntered out to Walkiki and watched the waves be sad.

"What can I do?" sobbed George. for the waves had touched his lachrymal sac.

"Buy a Douglas Patent Closet," came the reply. 'Twas the voice of Bath with his word of cheer.

PROFIT IN WATERMELONS.

It is surprising to note the size and quality of the watermelons which are being shipped to Honolulu from Kauai. The Chinese growers are sending these melons in to town in large quantities, and some of them are enormous in size and yet they are delicious. One dealer brought in a batch of melons on the Oahu Railroad one evening last week that netted him in the neighborhood of $900.

DROPSY

Do Your Ankles or Limbs Swell? Are Your Eyes Puffy? We are the Sole Agents for the Only Thing Known That Cures the Kidney Diseases That Cause Dropsy, viz., Fulton Compound.

It is now well known that dropsy is not a local disease, but is nearly always a symptom of kidney disease that accompanies the chronic stages heretofore incurable. Hence, up to the discovery of the Fulton Compound, dropsy was incurable. It is now, however, curable in nearly nine-tenths of all cases. Here is an interesting recovery, to which we refer by permission.

Mrs. Peter Goybantz, of 208 Fillmore street, San Francisco, became alarmingly dropsical. Her physician had finally to tap her every few days. She was tapped nearly forty times and grew worse from day to day. The physician finally told her husband that she had Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, that it was in an advanced chronic state and beyond medical aid. Her heart also gave her the usual trouble and she was in such a serious condition the relatives were sent for. They put her on Fulton's Compound. It stayed on the stomach, the first thing that had done so for a week. The second week the dropsy declined a little and the improvement was then gradual till her recovery was complete. This case was examined into by representatives of the San Francisco Star and the Overland Monthly, and the genuineness of the case and the recovery were fully attested in their columns.

Mrs. Thomas Christol of 426 Twenty-seventh street, San Francisco, was also swelling with dropsy, as the result of chronic kidney disease, so more than seventy-five pounds beyond her normal weight, and had to be moved in sheets and was close to death a day although she had four physicians. She was put on the Fulton Compound. Three weeks showed improvement and in six months she was well, and permits this reference.

If you have dropsy don't temporize. There is only one thing known that will cure the chronic kidney disease that is behind it and that is Fulton's Compound. The Best Compound for Bright's and Kidney Diseases, $1.00 per bottle. R. M. John, J. Fulton Co., 429 Washington street, San Francisco, sole compounders. Send for pamphlet. We are the sole agents for this city.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

CHAPTER I.—Grenfall Lorry, a wealthy American globe trotter, stumbles into acquaintance with a charming foreign girl on the train from Denver to Washington. The pair are left behind when the flier stops for repairs in West Virginia. II.—Lorry wires ahead to hold the train. He and the unknown girl ride four miles at a tearing pace in a mountain coach. There is no love-making, but a near approach to it as the rolling stage tumbles the passengers about. III.—Lorry dines with the foreign party, consisting of Miss Guggenlocker, Uncle Caspar and Aunt Yvonne. They are natives of Graustark, a country Lorry had never heard of before.

Notwithstanding his strange misgiving and the fact that his pride had sustained quite a perceptible shock, he drove with them to the station. They went to the sleeping car a few minutes before the time set for the train's departure and stood at the bottom of the steps, uttering the goodbyes, the goodspeeds and the sincere hopes that they might meet again. Then came the sharp activity of the trainmen, the hurry of belated passengers, life glanced soberly at his watch.

"It is 9 o'clock. Perhaps you would better get aboard," he said, and proceeded to assist Aunt Yvonne up the steps. She turned and pressed his hand gently before passing into the car.

"Adieu, good friend. You have made it so very pleasant for us," she said earnestly.

The tall, solidly old gentleman was waiting to assist his niece into the coach.

"Go first, Uncle Caspar," the girl made Lorry happy by saying. "I can easily come up unaided."

"Or I can assist her," Lorry hastened to add, giving her a grateful look which she could not misunderstand. The uncle shook hands warmly with the young man and passed up the steps. She was following when Lorry cried:

"Will you not allow me?" She laughingly turned to him from the steps and stretched forth her hand.

"And now it is goodbye forever. I am so sorry that I have not seen more of you," she said. He took her hand and held it tightly for a moment.

"I shall never forget the past few days," he said, a thrill in his voice. "You have put something into my life that can never be taken away. You will surprise."

"You are going out of my land, but not out of my mind. If you wish your eyes to see the change in me, you have only to look at them in a mirror. They are the change—they themselves! Goodbye! I hope that I may see you again."

She hesitated an instant, her eyes wavering beneath his. The train was moving slowly now.

"I pray that we may meet," she said softly at last—so softly that he barely heard the words. Had she uttered no sound he could have been sure of her response, for it was in her telltale eyes. His blood leaped madly. "You will be hurt if you wait till the train is running at full speed!" she cried, suddenly forget me before you are out of Washington, but I—I shall always see you as you are now."

"You are mistaken. Why should I forget you ever? Are you not the ideal American whose name I bought? I shall always remember you as I saw you—at Denver."

"Not as I have been since?" he cried. "Have you changed since first I saw you?" she asked quaintly.

"I have, indeed, for you saw me before I saw you. I am glad I have not changed for the worse in your eyes."

"As I first knew you with my eyes I will say that they are trustworthy," she said tantalizingly.

"I do not mean that I have changed externally."

"In any other case my eyes would not serve," she cried, with mock disappointment. "Still," she added sweepingly, you are my ideal American. Goodby! The man had called "all aboard!"

returning to the abandoned merry mood. She pushed him gently in her excitement. "Don't you see how rapidly we are moving? Please go!" There was a terror in her eyes that pleased him.

"Goodby, then!" he said. "Adieu, my American!" she cried quickly.

As he swung out ready to drop to the ground she said, her eyes sparkling with something that suggested mischief, her face more bewitching than ever under the flicker of the great arc lights:

"You must come to Edelweiss to see me. I shall expect you!" He thought there was a challenge in the tones. Or was it mockery?

"I will, by heaven, I will!" he exclaimed.

A startled expression flashed across her face, and her lips parted as if in protestation. As she leaned forward holding stoutly to the handrail, there was no smile on her countenance.

A white hand fluttered before his eyes, and she was gone. He stood, hat in hand, watching the two red lights at the end of the train until they were lost in the night.
